

João Monjardino 2023 Prize Mental Health: clinical research and mental health services

The call for the João Monjardino 2013 Prize is open under the Protocol signed between the Fundação para a Ciência e a Tecnologia, I.P. and the Fundação Professor Francisco Pulido Valente.

PURPOSE AND APPLICANTS

The Prize is intended to distinguish the best paper published on the topic Mental Health: clinical research and mental health services without restrictions on the year of publication, which describes the results of the research conducted by a researcher under 35 years old at the date of submission of the application, in an institution of the national scientific and technological system.

Only one original paper per candidate will be admitted to the Call, published or accepted for publication with proof of acceptance in a national or international journal of the speciality in which the applicant must be the first author or co-author (as long as it is acknowledged in the publication as having an equal contribution to the paper as the first author).

FUNDING

The amount of the Prize is 10.000 EUR (ten thousand euros), paid in equal shares by both foundations and awarded in a single instalment.

HOW AND WHEN TO APPLY

Applications must be submitted between 26 June 2023 and 29 September 2023 (5:00 PM, Lisbon time), by filling in the electronic form available here.

The following documents must be uploaded in the application form:

- Applicant's citizen card (Cartão de Cidadão – CC);
- Letter from the head of the research group, confirming that the research was carried out in their laboratory/institution, had his/her acknowledgement and approves the application. The letter must also contain information about the applicant's contribution to the work published or accepted for publication;
- Proof of acceptance for publication of the paper, if it has not yet been published.
